SCHOOL REPORT.

SCHOOL BOARD OF ORFORD:

By the terms of the contract with the supervisory district, your superintendent is required to give seven twenty-sixths or about 27% of his time to the schools of Orford. Since entering upon my work your schools have been in session 22 weeks or about 110 days. I have spent 30 days especially in the service of this town and have made 70 calls in the different schools, making fully the 37% required.

The school buildings of the town are in excellent condition and no large repairs are needed. At Orford Street and Orfordville it would be well if running water were provided, and the outbuildings should be separated to a considerable distance from each other and thoroughly screened.

The schools of this town have had the advantage of a well considered course of study, but improved methods, change of text books, etc., have rendered it to a large extent obsolete. The state program of studies furnishes an excellent outline of work for our schools, and a copy has been placed in the hands of each teacher. In this connection it should be plainly understood that no system can run itself, but depends primarily on constant expert oversight for its effectiveness; furthermore, progress must, for the sake of the children, be by slow and carefully considered steps. I know no reason why our country schools should not be as effective as those of the cities, but we must remember that the present system of city schools has been developing under expert supervision for more than fifty years.

Newseries of text books in arithmetic and writing have been provided since the beginning of the fall term. Other changes should be made. It is the custom in all country towns to retain school books in use long after they are unfit for the children to have. A worn out, ragged, imperfect book is a constant suggestion to the child to be satisfied with slovenly and careless ways. A system of record and accounting for books should be installed, material provided so that teachers may render "first aid to the injured" books, and then teachers and scholars held strictly accountable for the condition of property in their charge. Books would then be kept in good condition much longer, and when no longer good should be at once replaced by a new one.

Sickness has seriously affected the attendance in most of the schools during the winter especially, but in spite of all drawbacks there has been much excellent work done, and it is a pleasure to commend the earnest efforts and effective work of all the teachers. I desire to thank the teachers, school board, and people for the willing assistance and kindly good will that have met all my efforts to do the work entrusted to me.

Respectfully submitted,

D. F. CARPENTER, Superintendent.
